How is our perception of political life being transformed, and how are the rules on which we base our governance of complex future scenarios changing?

In the midst of the lively international debate around these questions Infomocracy by Malka Older, which will be published in Italian in July, offers a series of fascinating hypotheses.

The Workshop will feature a discussion including the author as well as experts and the public to better explore multiple perspectives on these questions at a particularly crucial moment in modern history.

Dr. Malka Ann Older, International development consultant in market-based economic development, disaster risk reduction, and climate change adaptation.

Prof. Giorgio Ventre, Head of the Department of Electrical Engineering and Information Technology (DIETI) "Federico II" University of Naples

Prof. Massimo De Santo, Professor of Computer Networks, Director of the ICT Center for Cultural Heritage, University of Salerno
